borders and conflict in south asia is the first full length study of the 1947 drawing of the indo pakistani boundary in punjab using the radcliffe commission as a window onto the decolonization and independence of india and pakistan and examining the competing interests both internal and international that influenced the actions of the various major players it highlights british efforts to maintain a grip on india even as the decolonization process spun out of control drawing on extensive archival research in india pakistan and britain combined with innovative use of cartographic sources the book paints a vivid picture of both the partition process and the radcliffe line s impact on punjab this book will be vital reading for scholars and students of colonialism decolonization partition and borderlands studies while providing anyone interested in south asia s independence with a highly readable account of one of its most controversial episodes for the century and a half before the second world war britain dominated the indian subcontinent britain s east india company ruled enclaves of land in south asia for a century and a half before that for these 300 years conquerors and governors projected themselves as heroes and improvers the british public were sold an image of british authority and virtue but beneath the veneer of pomp and splendour british rule in india was anxious fragile and fostered chaos britain s indian empire was built by people who wanted to make enough money to live well back in britain to avoid humiliation and danger to put their narrow professional expertise into practice the institutions they created from law courts to railway lines were designed to protect british power without connecting with the people they ruled the result was a precarious regime that provided indian society with no leadership and which oscillated between paranoid paralysis and occasional moments of extreme violence the lack of affection between rulers and ruled finally caused the system s collapse but even after its demise the raj lives on in the false idea of the efficacy of centralized authoritarian power indians responded to the peculiar nature of british power by doing things for themselves creating organisations and movements that created an order and prosperity of its own india conquered revises the way we think about nation building as much as empire showing how many of the institutions that shaped twentieth century india pakistan and bangladesh were built in response to british power the result is an engaging story vital for anyone who wants to understand the history of empires and the origins of contemporary south asian society the international bestseller stands out for its judicious and unsparing look at events from a british perspective dominic sandbrook sunday times between january and august 1947 the conflicting political religious and social tensions in india culminated in independence from britain and the creation of pakistan in partition barney white spinner shines a light on those turbulent months this period saw the end of ninety years of the british raj and the effective power of the maharajahs as the congress party established itself commanding a democratic government in delhi it also witnessed the rushed creation of pakistan as a country in two halves whose capitals were 2000 kilometres apart from september to december 1947 the euphoria surrounding independence dissipated into shame and incrimination nearly one million people died and countless more lost their homes and their livelihoods as partition was realised the events of those months would dictate the history of south asia for the next seventy years leading to three wars countless acts of terrorism polarisation around the cold war powers and to two nations with millions living in poverty spending disproportionate amounts on their military the legacy of decisions taken that year still continues those at the centre became some of the most enduring characters of the twentieth century gandhi and nehru enjoyed almost saint like status in india and still do while jinnah is lionised in pakistan the british cast from churchill to attlee and mountbatten find their contribution praised and damned in equal measure yet it is not only the national players whose stories fascinate many ordinary people who witnessed the events of that year are still alive and have a clear recollection of the excitement and the horror illustrating the story of 1947 with their experiences partition brings this terrible era for the indian subcontinent vividly to life
